The Implications of EPO Opposition Proceedings on Enforcement and Validity Actions in Turkey

Intellectual Property , Patents and Utility Models
By Özge Atılğan Karakulak and Selin Sinem Erciyas

The strength of a patent may seem questionable in an enforcement attempt at national level because of pending EPO proceedings and the implementation of the Article 138/3 of EPC may be the only tool for the EP holder in most cases to survive from the national invalidation attack.

Court of Appeals: Target Consumers' Level of Attention Rules out Likelihood of Confusion

Intellectual Property , Trademarks and Designs
By Hande Hançar, Dicle Doğan and Dilan Sıla Kayalica

In this article, we examined a recent decision issued by the Court of Appeals, ruling that there is no likelihood of confusion between A-101 and A10.com trademarks, because of the high level of attention in part of the target consumers.
