Turkish Court of Cassation's Stance on Short Word Trademarks

Trademarks and Designs
By Mutlu Yıldırım Köse and İrem Girenes Yücesoy

Turkish Court of Cassation's recent decisions concerning short-word trademarks illustrate a consistent approach: courts place significant emphasis on the dominant elements of a mark when assessing similarity and the likelihood of confusion.

Schrödinger's Paradox in the Patent World: Can a Marketed Product Fall Outside the Prior Art?

Patents and Utility Models
By Selin Sinem Erciyas and Beste Turan Kurtoğlu

EPO's G 1/23 shakes the patent world: a marketed product counts as prior art if it can be analysed—full reproducibility is no longer required. Claim drafting and strategy may need a radical rethink.
